EDGE London opens its first leading resource center for sustainability minded brands in the interior design and build space in June 2020

Explore comfort, luxury and future conscious living aesthetics with zero waste

London, March 23, 2020. EDGE, today announces that it will open its first London resource center in Marylebone at the beginning of June this year. EDGE - Eco Design for Greener Environments, is located next to busy Baker Street underground in the popular Marylebone design district.

The approximately 2400 square-foot EDGE centre will offer solutions at the forefront of the eco and sustainable design movement. Spread over 3 floors, EDGE offers a continually evolving, design-led showcase of stimulating materials, collaborative workspaces and on-hand advice for professionals and public alike.

Playing host to open and inspiring talks, CPD's and workshops to help enrich the debate and foster a legacy surrounding sustainability, the company plans to introduce a variety of brands to the space in June 2020.

More information about the brands that will be offered by EDGE at the London location and the opening event can be found at <http://www.edgelondon.eco>

EDGE is committed to inspiring and supporting positive change to the ways in which we design and construct our built environments. Its main focus is creating a space on the high street and online to connect sustainably conscious material suppliers and specifiers.

George Papatheodorou, CEO of EDGE London, commented "We spend 80% of our time indoors and at a time when the debate surrounding humankind's impact on the earth, its climate and the people who inhabit it continues to intensify, it is more important than ever that we have a responsible attitude to material specification. To do so requires makers and manufacturers to take a considered approach to sustainability and at EDGE we make it our mission to find them. We do not believe that materials designed to reduce their negative social and environmental impact should ever hinder innovation - if anything, they should enhance it. We don't have all the solutions, but that won't stop us from striving to discover them and bringing them into the public realm."
