

Step Inside Quantum - Press release

Quantum is more present in our daily lives than we think, and local young Londoners will show you how in Step Inside Quantum.

Discover quantum and its applications through the immersive installation co-produced by 18-25-year-olds, Imperial College London researchers and textiles artist Chloé Rochefort. You can find it at the Main Entrance of Imperial College London South Kensington Campus, from the 15 to the 20 September.

As one of the Young Producers, Orna Costello, puts it: “I always thought quantum was this like otherworldly thing but in reality, it's just like a fundamental part of our lives.”

The gates that form the sensory-based installation will take visitors into a journey through the intricate world of quantum. Colours, materials and techniques were carefully picked by the group to communicate the complexities of this field, from its discovery to its multiple applications.

