

The London Embroidery Studio Brings Cutting-Edge Textile Innovation to the Forefront of Design

London, UK – Sept 2025 – The London Embroidery Studio proudly celebrates eighteen years as a leading name in bespoke embroidery design and production. Founded in 2007 by visionary textile artist Andrew Kenny, the studio has flourished from its East London base at 38 Ermine Mews into an internationally recognized hub for fashion, stage & screen, installations, interiors, and material development. The studio invites the design world to rethink embroidery as a powerful medium for storytelling, experimentation, and material evolution.

Award-winning craftsmanship

Under Andy Kenny's leadership the studio has earned accolades from the British Fashion Council and D&AD, establishing itself at the forefront of textile innovation.

Cutting-edge services and techniques

With investment in state-of-the-art machinery, the studio blends traditional hand-embroidery with digital processes. It offers services including artwork creation, sampling & development, in-house medium sized production, and specialist techniques like beading, ribboning, cording, sequins, and large-scale digital embroidery.

High-profile collaborations

The London Embroidery Studio has collaborated with luxury fashion houses such as Dior, Celine, JW Anderson, Louis Vuitton, Vivienne Westwood, and Edward Crutchley. Its work also graces major stage and screen productions—Gladiator II, Wicked the Movie, Napoleon, Joseph, Frozen and Royal Opera House costumes—and installations like the Anomaly x Johnnie Walker Oscars 2023 campaign and BBC World Cup animation.

Innovative material development

Harnessing digital embroidery's potential, the studio explores surface texture creation for CMF and interior design industries—working with brands like PriestmanGoode, Jet Aviation, Nike, Argent Design, Dark Room, WeWork and Callum Design.

Quotes

“Our goal is to push boundaries—to merge tradition with technology and empower designers to explore embroidery as a truly innovative medium.” – Andy Kenny, Founder & CEO
