London Design Festival X Interior Design Declares

London Design Festival celebrates and promotes the city as a global design capital with the aim to:

Showcase London’s creativity by bringing together the country’s leading thinkers, practitioners, retailers, and educators for an unmissable celebration of design.

Interior Design Declares is a network of interior design practices, suppliers to the industry, and educational institutions committed to addressing the climate and biodiversity emergency. Each signatory organisation is expected to self-govern its progress toward the commitments outlined in the declaration.

The IDD steering group has partnered with the London Design Festival to champion London’s creative leadership, highlighting a range of sustainability-focused projects. These include realised, publicly accessible spaces; private homes embracing circular design principles; and conceptual projects on the cusp of realisation.

Interior Design Declares joins London Design Festival to spotlight circular, regenerative design in action. Featuring David Chenery (GAILS’s), Nina Woodcroft (Nina+Co), and Erika Suzuki (The Greenest House), the event explores how the IDD pledges are shaping climate-conscious interiors.
