

PRESS RELEASE

Flukette presents Housewarming during London Design Festival 2026

This September, London-based homeware brand Flukette will present Housewarming, its first immersive pop-up during London Design Festival.

Located at 353 Portobello Road in Notting Hill, Housewarming has been designed as a lived-in home rather than a traditional retail space. Visitors are invited to wander from room to room, discovering the rituals, stories and everyday moments that make a house feel like home.

Working closely with artisans across Morocco, Flukette creates handcrafted ceramics, lighting, furniture and decorative objects produced in small batches using traditional techniques. Throughout the installation, these pieces are displayed as they are intended to be lived with, becoming part of everyday routines, shared meals and quiet moments at home.

During the event, visitors can explore the Cabinet of Curiosities, browse the Homebody Newspaper and add their own thoughts at the drawing station. From Friday to Sunday, they can also personalise their own scented candle at the candle-making bar. Housewarming will also mark the launch of Flukette's very first scented candle, alongside a special collaboration with Barnaby Bars.

Founded by Caroline Kruger, Flukette believes the best moments happen at home. Rather than creating objects to follow trends, the brand designs pieces that bring warmth, personality and a sense of story into contemporary homes while celebrating the craftsmanship of the artisans who make them.

“Housewarming is our way of welcoming people into the world of Flukette. We wanted to create a place where visitors could slow down, feel at home and discover how handcrafted objects quietly become part of everyday life.”

— Caroline Kruger, Founder of Flukette

About Flukette

Flukette is a London-based homeware brand working with artisans across Morocco to create handcrafted objects for everyday living. Produced in small batches using traditional techniques, every collection celebrates craftsmanship, colour and the stories that handmade objects carry. Inspired by the belief that home should be a place to feel, not perfect, Flukette creates pieces designed to be lived with rather than simply displayed.
